The men rushed forward in no particular order, firing at and pursuing the enemy with a determination that could not be thwarted, driving them further than they had yet been driven. But during the whole engagement the Fourth and Fifth Kentucky displayed the utmost gallantry, worthy of the laurels they had won at Shiloh. Better men never followed a flag or faced an enemy than compose these two regiments. Col. Thos. H. Hunt, of the Fifth, was in com mand of the brigade, and received a serious shot in the left hip while actively engaged on the field. He is a model soldier and the beau ideal of an officer, and his fall occasioned a pang of regret in the minds of all his men. Lieut, Col. Caldwell and Capt Cripps Wickliffe were worthy of their regiment, which exhibits the heaviest loss of any on the field. The Fourth Kentucky was without field officers, but under Captain Millett it proved a host, bearing through the heat of the fray its tattered and bulletriddled banner, now thrice consecrated to glory by baptism of fire and blood. NEW YORK, August 19. Tribune letters say that Harrison's Landing has been evacuated without a struggle, without a blow, without even the loss of a single man. The immense army of the Potomac, officers and men, bag and baggage, stores, tents, horses, ammunition and contrabands, are now far away from Harrison's Landing-leaving it deserted and desolate. August 7th, 1862.

SIR: It is one of the happiest moments of my life that I am enabled to inform the Department of the destruction of the ram Arkansas, not because I held this iron-clad monster in such terror, but because the community did. On the 4th inst., I sent the Tennessee up to Baton Rouge with provisions for Commander Porter and the gunboats stationed at that place. On the night of the fifth she returned, with the information that the enemy had made a combined attack on Baton Rouge with the ram and

At daylight the Hartford was under way for this place, with orders for the other vessels to follow me as fast as they were ready. I arrived here, to-day, at 12 m., in company with the Brooklyn, Westfield, Clinton, Jackson, and Sciota. I had sent the Cayuja up by request of Gen. Butler, in consequence of the guerrillas firing into some of his transports. On my arrival I was in-formed by Commander W. D. Porter, that, yesterday morning, at two o'clock, the enemy's forces, under Gen. Breckinridge, attacked Gen. Williams and drove in his pickets.

Gen. Williams having had ample warning, all was prepared for him. The fight was continued with great energy on both sides till 10 A. M., by which time the enemy had been driven two or three miles. but unfortunately the gallant Gen'. liams was killed. Fortunately, he had in-formed Lieut. commanding Ransom the evening before, of his plans, and requested him not to fire again until he notified him. and when he did so our gunboats opened with fine effect, throwing their shells directly in the midst of the enemy, producing great dismay and confusion among

I will leave a sufficient force of gunboats here to support the army, and will return to-morrow New Orleans, and depart immediately for Ship Island, with a light heart, that I have left no bugbear to terment the com-munities of the Mississippi in my absence.
